Co-Design with Young People

Resource List

Co-Production Wales is a voluntary alliance of individuals and organisations with a shared mission: to build on the best of traditions of cooperation and community to transform Wales into a society that places co-production principles at the heart of its public services, its communities, and the lives of its citizens. It has produced a number of resources and publications that can be accessed here: <https://allinthistogetherwales.wordpress.com/>

National Voices is the coalition of charities (in England) that stands for people being in control of their health and care. It works for a strong patient and citizen voice and services built around people. It has produced 6 principles for engaging people and communities. Its website can be accessed here: <http://www.nationalvoices.org.uk/publications/our-publications/six-principles-engaging-people-and-communities>

The King's Fund have produced an Experience Based Co-Design Toolkit which can be accessed here: <https://www.kingsfund.org.uk/projects/ebcd>. Although this is focused on health and social care, some of its ideas may be applicable in other areas of work.

The Scottish Co-production Network was formed as an informal network in 2010, co-facilitated and chaired by Scottish Community Development Centre and NHS Tayside on a voluntary basis. The network is a response to the growing interest in co-production across several sectors in Scotland. It has produced a range of resources and publications about the co-production process and the lessons being learnt in Scotland. The website can be accessed here: <http://www.coproductionscotland.org.uk/>

Some other websites that have material on co-design with young people include the following:

Peace Child International, United Games International, United Games Hungary, Yaka International and Young Voices Slovenia have produced a guide to Co-Management: Co-Management A Practical Guide with sections detailing what is needed for co-design and co-production with young people as well as schools, health providers, families and others. It can be accessed here: <http://youthcore.ca/download.php?id=83>

Storify has several articles on different aspects of co-design with young people. See here for more: <https://storify.com/dtye/encouraging-co-design-with-young-people>

We are Snook have come up with 7 tips for co-design with young people. The tips can be accessed here: <https://wearesnook.com/co-design-young-people/>
